

Indiana has an extremely effective law for telemarketing.
I, as many in Indiana, have signed up for the no-call list.
It has dramatically improved the quality of my evenings at home.
I do not participate in solicitations over the phone (never have and never want to), and so I now do not have to deal with the nuisance.
I understand that companies insist that they need to call people to help their business, but I as many don't want to participate in telephone soliciting.
The list of people like me should make their job easier because they don't have to waste time and resources on me.
Please do not cause a reverse affect. I do not want to hear my phone ringing constantly again.

Thank you,
Joseph C Becker
